

Think-Like a Disciplinarian:
The Outsiders by S. E. Hinton

BACKGROUND:

Think Like a Disciplinarian

An academic disciplinarian is an expert in a particular field of study. Disciplinarians teach, conduct research and publish their findings in peer-reviewed scholarly journals. They may also be experts in an applied field, where they use their expertise to perform specialized tasks rather than conduct basic research. Many disciplinarians have expertise and collaborate with others in different disciplines.

TASK:

Students break into expert groups based on interest. As the class reads the novel, the expert groups assume the perspective of the expert, take notes, conduct research, hold discussions and plan a project.

EXEMPLAR GROUP: Think Like a Politician

This project is a proposal for city-wide football league, formed to build bridges and ease tension between the feuding gangs in the story, thus leading to lower crime rates in the city.

The Outsiders Think-Like Expert Choices:

Sociologist, psychologist, politician, economist, police officer, creative writer, journalist, English professor, parent, philosopher, lawyer, director, city planner

ASSIGNMENT 1: Choosing Your Discipline

- 1. Take the career test to see what careers your likes/dislikes lead to.
<http://www.yourfreecareertest.com>
Write down the top four. Give your opinion on your top choice.
You MAY OR MAY NOT use the results to guide your expert choice.
- 2. Write down the top three choices that interest you from The Outsiders think-like expert choices:
- 3. Using the provided website or a similar one, write down the following information for those think like choices:
 - a. How to become that expert:
 - b. Description of job:
 - c. Specific tasks that the expert would perform:
- 4. As you read, you will be recording the thoughts and views of your assigned expert. Twice weekly, you'll meet with your expert group to discuss your findings.

